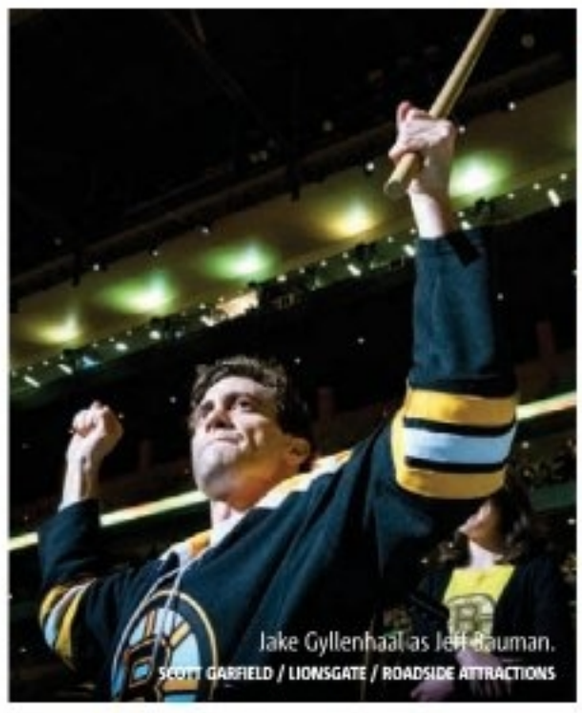
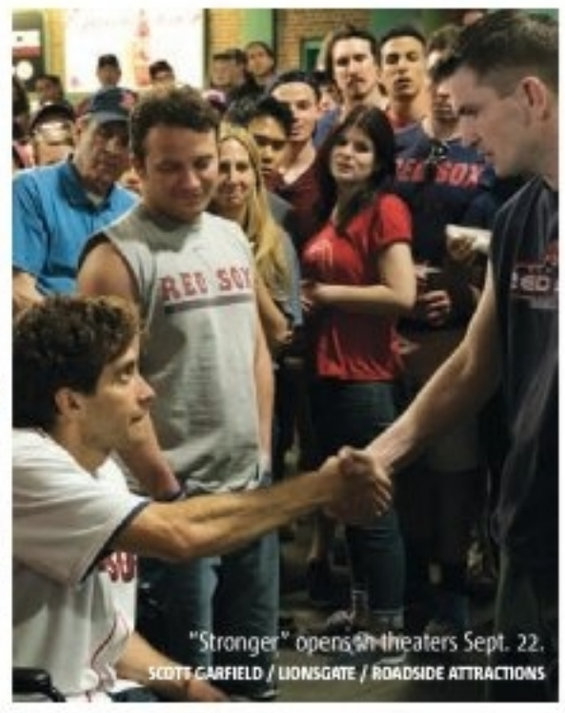
How 'Stronger' tackles hero worship and conspiracy theorists

Jake Gyllenhaal and Jeff Bauman open up about the new film.

MATT JUUL



Jake Gyllenhaal as Jeff Bauman. SCOTT GARFIELD / LIONSGATE / ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS



"Stronger" opens in theaters Sept. 22. SCOTT GARFIELD / LIONSGATE / ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS

It's been a long day for Jake Gyllenhaal and Jeff Bauman. The duo has been on a nonstop press tour for "Stronger" — the new film about the Marathon bombing survivor's road to recovery after losing his legs — and now they're back in town for another premiere.

Although Gyllenhaal, who plays Bauman, is used to a packed schedule of interviews, the Chelmsford native still gets anxious being in the spotlight. While the parade of media makes Bauman a bit uneasy, you wouldn't notice thanks to his charm, infectious smile and the hilarious repartee between himself and Gyllenhaal.

The two have clearly formed quite the bromance, often poking fun at each other in interviews. But their friendship is more than wise-cracks, as they've each learned valuable lessons from one another.

Jake and Jeff. GETTY IMAGES

As they prepare to walk the red carpet for a screening at the Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital, where Bauman was treated following the attack, Gyllenhaal can't help but praise his pal for his resilience.

"There are moments we've been in with people we love where we thought, 'I don't want to take another step further, I don't want to do this anymore,'" Gyllenhaal says. "Jeff's story says you can take that step. You can last that next minute or hour and to me, it's exactly the story that I think needs to be in the world right now."

After helping the FBI identify one of the bombers while going through the most traumatic moment of his life, Bauman has been hailed as a hero. Unfortunately, this mantle comes with constant attention from the media and locals, who haven't really left Bauman alone since he appeared in that iconic photo with the cowboy hat-wearing Carlos Arredondo.

As the film shows, even though the community tried to shower Bauman with praise at events like his flag-waving, Bruins game appearance, having all those eyeballs on him just amplified his anxiety. But most of all, Bauman felt that he wasn't worthy of being called a hero — a term he feels he doesn't live up to.

"I have different heroes in my eyes: the first responders and police and everybody else in my life," Bauman says. "I hate being called a hero because there are so many better people out there."

If his actions after the Marathon weren't enough, Bauman deserves to be called a hero for the way he's handled scrutiny from conspiracy theorists. One scene in "Stronger" shows Bauman getting into an altercation with locals who think the bombing was a "false flag."

While he used to resent these people, Bauman doesn't hold any grudges and hopes the film opens their eyes.

"Deep down, they're probably just scared and they're probably just lost about what their beliefs are," he says. "I hope this film will reflect that this is a real person. This really happened and this was someone real and maybe they can relate to it."

Jenna Fischer on 'Brad's Status' and 'The Office' reboot rumors

The actress talks about her new film and if she'd return to Dunder Mifflin. MATT JUUL

Ben Stiller and Jenna Fischer in "Brad's Status."
ALL PHOTOS JONATHAN WENK / AMAZON STUDIOS

"Brad's Status" opens Sept. 22.

No matter how successful we become, our social media-savvy world has made it easy to sink down a spiral of depression as we scroll through our friend's picture-perfect Instagram feeds.

This digitally-induced despair is at the heart of director Mike White's new comedy drama "Brad's Status." The film stars Ben Stiller as Brad, a middle-aged dad who finds himself stuck in a mid-life crisis as he takes his kid on a college road trip to Boston.

Although Stiller's character is blessed with a smart son and a devoted wife, played by Jenna Fischer, he can't stop obsessing over his college pals' successes.

We caught up with Fischer to talk about her new film, plus her thoughts on "The Office" reboot rumors.

You didn't get to film in Boston, but are you a fan of the city?
Yeah! My very best friend from childhood moved to Boston when I was little and the first time I flew on an airplane by myself was to go visit her. She had moved so that was really significant and I remember they took me everywhere, they showed me all the sights. More recently, one of my very best girlfriends is from Boston and she got married there, so I was there for her wedding. It's so beautiful there.

Do you ever compare yourself with friends on social media like Brad?
It's all kind of a losing battle because if I were a stranger looking at my own Instagram account, I would be jealous of my own life. I think we all have become really good at becoming our own personal branding machines that none of us are even actually living the life that we're presenting on Facebook or on social media.

Are you down for the rumored "Office" reboot?
I've been reading those rumors, too and I would just have to say that nobody has called anybody or made any offers. I don't know where those rumors got started. I think it would be really just logistically difficult to assemble the whole cast again. I'm under contract with a completely different network now. I'm doing an ABC show. I mean, listen, big wigs make things happen all the time, so I'm not going to stand in the way of anything. But, like I said, people have ways of making things happen if they want to make them happen. Studios talk and make deals and negotiate things, so I don't know, but I would love to work with that group of people again in any capacity.

Equinox block party brings food and fitness to the Seaport

Boston health nuts should head to the Seaport on Saturday, as Equinox is hosting a special block party in celebration of their new location.

Dubbed the Block at Seaport Common, the event will feature plenty of workouts, and no fitness-themed party would be complete without a few head-to-head challenges against your friends or experts from Equinox.

Another can't-miss feature of the block party is an appearance by "Top Chef" alum Tiffani Faison. Many locals may have already tasted Faison's cooking at her Fenway restaurants, Sweet Cheeks Q and Tiger Mama, but at the Block, guests will get the chance to chat with the culinary star, as well as take part in cooking demonstrations.

After getting sufficiently hungry from hearing about all that food, folks can visit a marketplace with local vendors and picnic spaces. Munch on offerings from food truck brands like Juice Press, Bon Me, RICE BURG, ChickChack Food Truck and Sate Grill, all while dancing to music, courtesy of DJ Abby Duren.

A panel discussion with bloggers Ashley and Katie Hess, co-host of NESN's "Dining Playbook" Jenny Johnson as well as FOX25 anchor Kerry Kavanaugh will explore the experience of women in media, and what it's like to constantly be in an "always on" media environment.

5 Beers to try at the Copenhagen Beer & Music Festival

ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

Grab a few new brews this weekend.

CHRIS LEO PALERMINO

Scandinavia's finest breweries will share their suds in Boston's South End this weekend when the Copenhagen Beer & Music Festival takes over the SoWa Power Station.

The event brings together brewers from Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Belgium, England and across the U.S. for an international celebration of the best in beer. The brewers themselves, rather than volunteers, will pour their brews in an effort to "create the feeling that we are all having a family get-together," says Mikkeller Brewing co-founder Mikkel Borg Bjergsø.

Bjergsø began the festival in his home city of Copenhagen to have a party with friends from the business. Now he's helping to bring the festival back to Boston for its second year.

Since there are more than 50 beers available at this weekend's fest, we enlisted Bjergsø to help us find the five brews you definitely have to try.

Stigbergets' Stiggy Puddin:
The Swedish brewery made a name for itself when they released a highly acclaimed, limited edition IPA at last year's Gothenburg Beer Week, but its beers are still only found in Sweden. Stiggy Pudding is a fruity, hoppy IPA that is sure to please.

Superstition Meadry's Chocolate Strawbery Sunrise:
The barrel aged mead from the Arizona-based meadery, cider house and winery is as potent as it is flavorful. Strawberries, vanilla and chocolate coexist in this dark concoction. And it's 13% alcohol, so indulge wisely. "These guys make the most awesome meads," says Bjergsø. (Only available during the Saturday evening session.)

Try Floyds' Zombie Dust.

Lervig's Hop Drop Sour:
The sour beer is tart with flavors of lemon and tropical fruits. It's a perfect end-of-summer beer for those who like to test their taste buds. Norway brewery Lervig, often named one of the best breweries in Scandinavia, makes the aptly named brew.

3 Floyds' Zombie Dust:
A hoppy American pale ale from the Munster, Indiana brewery. Bitter with a smooth finish, it's been a highly hyped beer in recent years. Bjergsø believes it's not just hype. "Best APA in the world," he says.

Omnipollo's Lorelei:
This imperial porter is one of Scandinavia's highest rated beers, according to RateBeer. And actually, the recipe comes from Dave Strachan, who won a home brewing competition held by UK's Siren and Swedish brewery Omnipollo last year. Heavy, with hints of maple and coconut, it's best saved for last. (Only available during the Friday evening session.)

Jamie Foxx on Big Papi, Boston and the keys to a great party

Jamie Foxx partied like a jetsetter in Boston.
ERIC LEVIN OF ELEVIN STUDIOS

Get your groove on like the Grammy Award winner.

MATT JUUL

Jamie Foxx is known for throwing great parties in celebrity circles, so it's no surprise that he had a blast during his recent trip to Boston.

The Oscar and Grammy-winning star helped W Hotels unveil its new "Jetset" package, in partnership with jet charter company JetLux. Guests who stay at the W's Extreme WOW suites in Boston or New York can now get the star treatment by adding on a round-trip, private plane ride between the cities, with black car service, for an additional fee.

After a champagne-filled brunch at the W's Time Square location, Foxx hopped on a jet to keep the party going at the hotel in Boston last weekend. The 49-year-old actor told Metro that he was thrilled to spend some time in the Hub, as a few of his best friends hail from Southie.

Boston has meant a lot to Foxx as he cut his teeth in the Bay State while trying to make it as a comic back in the day. Foxx has fond memories of his shows in places like Springfield and Chicopee.

"Faneuil Hall is where I started my comedy career," Foxx said. "It really means a lot because, at that time, a young comedian coming up, going to Boston, being from Texas, never been anywhere — they just gave me so much love."

Foxx brought the good times with him back to the city, as he surprised the small gathering with an impromptu performance of his greatest hits. For the "Ray" and "Django Unchained" star, breaking out into song is necessary for a great party.

When Foxx would throw bashes at his house during his early days in Los Angeles, he'd make famous guests like Kanye West perform for the crowd, which eventually led to his own foray into music. Aside from bringing the beats, Foxx also makes sure that his soirées have the right mix of people.

"What makes a great party is what's right inside your heart, what's right inside your mind and what you project," Foxx said. "No amount of money can make it better or worse. What we do is we try to put great people in the same room with each other."

An example of Foxx's varied guest list would be the time he invited the Olympic basketball team to his house, along with David Blaine. Let's just say things got pretty wild when the athletes received a taste of Blaine's "sorcery."

"You see Kevin Durant and David Blaine, both are great at what they do," Foxx said. "David Blaine's magic was so good. Black folks, at a certain level of magic, we get a little nervous like, 'That was sorcery.' Kevin Durant was like, 'Hey man, I don't know. That's too good.' But that's what a good party's about."

As for Foxx's favorite Bostonian to party with, he praised former Red Sox slugger David Ortiz.

"It was amazing to be able to meet Big Papi because watching him and what he did when he made that great speech [after the Marathon bombing], that's what you like to do," Foxx said. "You like to take that energy and bounce it back, take something from that and send it out into the world."

Head to Vermont's Field Guide for a luxurious, fall foliage experience. LARK HOTELS

When the leaves begin to turn and the air goes crisp, New England becomes an autumn wonderland that attracts folks from every corner of the world. If you're itching to see the region in its full foliage glory, here are our tips on where to go.

Massachusetts

Cruise down Route 2 to Phillipston for a visit to Red Apple Farm (455 Highland Ave, Phillipston). Not only is their apple picking the perfect autumn activity, but the entire hour-and-a-half drive is filled with fall foliage.

If you want to stay a little closer to Worcester, Moore State Park (1 Sawmill Rd., Paxton) in Paxton has endless waterfalls and cascades, as well as long trails, a saw mill and even a perfect New England covered bridge. There's also Rutland State Park (2 Crawford Rd., Rutland), a 300-acre recreation area ideal for strolling or riding bikes, and it gets bonus points for being dog-friendly. Before heading back to Boston, make a pitstop in Worcester at Deadhorse Hill (281 Main St., Worcester) for weekend brunch.

Connecticut

Gambling doesn't have to be your thing in Connecticut, where the leaves are already starting to turn. The Mashantucket Pequot Tribal Reservation has a sea of towering trees and endless trails that are so beautiful, you may not even know that Foxwoods Resort & Casino (350 Trolley Line Blvd., Mashantucket) is nearby.

But if you're looking for a nice meal and a cocktail, you can certainly find that easily. Altra Strada (240 Fox Tower Drive, Mashantucket) is just a few steps away for an Italian feast.

New Hampshire

It's just a two-and-a-half hour drive from Boston to the White Mountains, and Franconia Notch is easy to find. Snag at room at the picturesque Inn at Sunset Hill (231 Sunset Hill Rd. Sugar Hill) and take the Aerial Tramway to the 4,080-foot summit of Cannon Mountain to soak up the whole experience.

Speaking of soaking, don't forget to stop by Polly's Pancake Parlor (672 NH-117, Sugar Hill) to soak up your pancakes with maple syrup. Just an FYI, they don't take reservations on weekends or holidays.

Maine

Midcoast Maine looks straight out of a L.L.Bean catalog, and the bucolic town of Damariscotta doesn't disappoint. Head there on Columbus Day

'Exit the King'

Actors' Shakespeare Project dusts off this 1962 comedy by Eugene Ionesco, about a once powerful but now incompetent ruler who's made a wreck of his country, and the court trying to break through his denial and make him understand he's dying. Any resemblance to certain stubborn, delusional, currently living heads of state is entirely your interpretation.

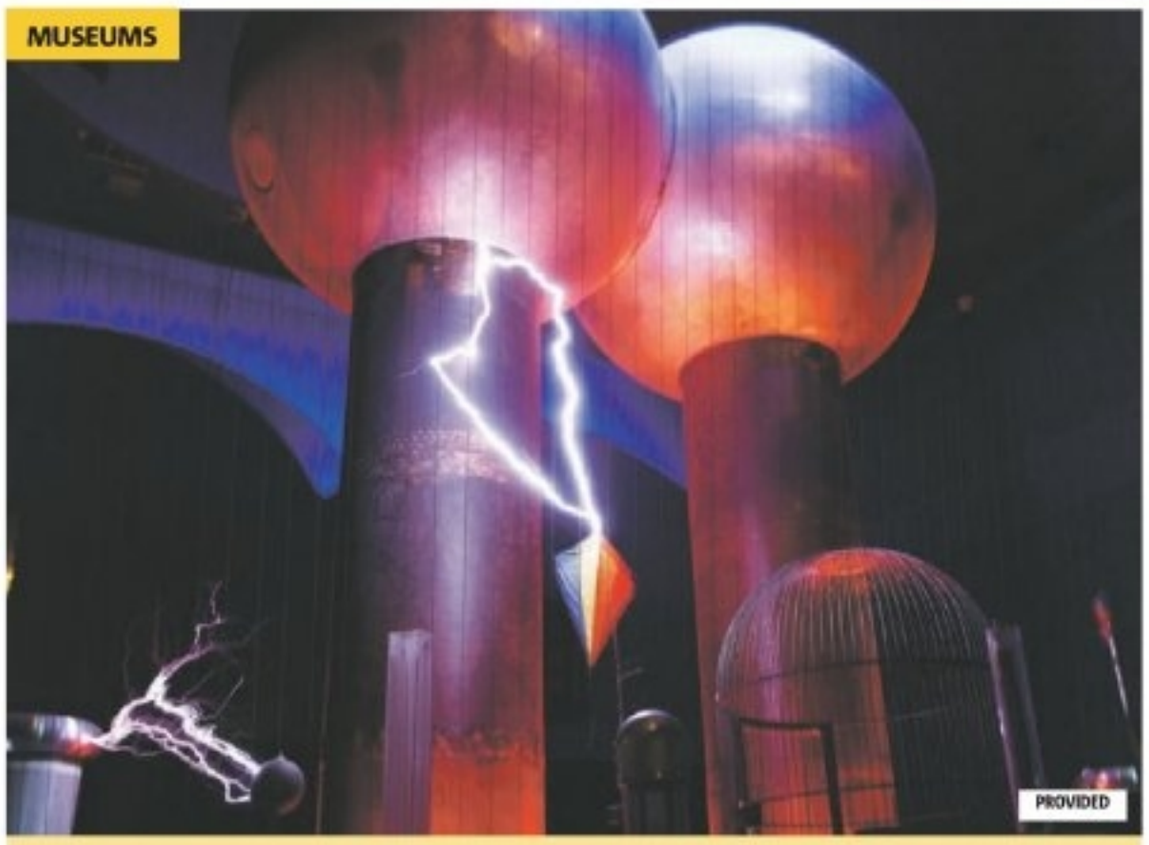
MUSEUMS



PROVIDED

College Night at the Museum of Science

College students get into the Museum of Science free on Friday. If you grew up in much of New England you probably took a field trip here at some point, which means you can show your friends from California and Minnesota how cool the musical stairs are and the Theater of Electricity and Live Animal shows will be free as well. Sept. 22, 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., Museum of Science, 1 Science Park, Boston, free w/ student ID, mos.org

DRINK

Braille and Brew

Beer tastings are a dime a dozen these days, so when one comes along with a little twist it tends to stand out. This benefit for the National Braille Press, a nonprofit that's been helping the blind read for 90 years, throws blindfolds into the mix. Who knows, you might just find that color preference was stopping you from finding your new favorite beer.
Sept. 21, 5:30 p.m., Aeronaut Brewing Company, 14 Tyler St., Somerville, $35, 21+, aeronautbrewing.com

Dorchester Brewing Company Oktoberfest

Yes, it's that time of year. Whether you're German or not, Oktoberfest is a great excuse to drink a bit more beer than usual. Dorchester Brewing Company made a unique beer just for their Oktoberfest party, and they'll be serving it in appropriately big steins. There's music from the Mad Bavarian Brass Band, beer-filled pretzels and donuts and others delights.
Sept. 23, 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m., Dorchester Brewing Company, 1250 Massachusetts Ave., Dorchester, free, 21+, dorchesterbrewing.com

COMEDY

Starstruck: Close Encounters of the Awkward Kind

Famous people: when we see one, we all want to act cool and let them go about their day, except that that's almost impossible. So we bug them and embarrass ourselves. In this sideshow of the Boston Comedy Festival, comics Bethany Van Delft and Nick Chambers regular folks share their unfortunate encounters with not-so-regular folks: cringe, laugh, repeat.

FESTIVALS

ROSALEE ZAMMUTO

What the Fluff?

Boston area locals, bored to tears with all that touristy colonial crap, naturally fixate on lesser-known bits of their region's history. Case in point: this annual festival commemorating the invention of Marshmallow Fluff in Somerville in 1917 — important? You better believe it. And this year's the 100th anniversary, so it's going to be a major blowout — excuse us, Fluff-out.
Sept. 23, 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., Union Square Plaza, 90 Union Sq., Somerville, free, flufffestival.com

Bearstronaut

The local dance band Bearstronaut turns 10 this year and while they're definitely a local institution, national recognition has been a tough — though not hopeless — battle. Just a month ago, in fact, they appeared on "Jimmy Kimmel Live." Perhaps soon America will finally learn to love their slick, romantic fusion of EDM and indie dance-pop. Sept. 23, 6:30 p.m., Middle East Upstairs, 472 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, $10, 18+, mideastclub.com

Seu Jorge Presents: The Life Aquatic, a Tribute to David Bowie

Despite the fact that David Bowie died well over a year ago, this concert is billed as being "in commemoration of David Bowie's recent passing." A little odd, but you don't really need an excuse to enjoy Brazilian singer Seu Jorge's beautiful nylon-stringed Bowie renditions, which dredge the emotional depths of an artist known for his embrace of rock's superficial trappings. Sept. 24, 7 p.m., Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, $52-$102, bso.og

Navy hosting hackathon at MIT to attract tech-savvy millennials

The Navy needs tech experts to protect the country against cyberattacks, so the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is hosting the event. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

The U.S. Navy is asking for help from young techies in the Boston area — but don't worry, there's no boot camp involved.

This weekend, hackers, academics and entrepreneurs will tackle national security problems at HACKtheMACHINE, a hackathon held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Navy, contractor Booz Allen Hamilton and MIT have partnered up for the three-day event, from Sept. 22 to 24, to lure tech-savvy millennials to the military branch, no sea legs required.

"What we're trying to do is build the Blue Angels for geeks," said Commander Zachary Staples, director of the Naval Postgraduate School's Center for Cyber Warfare. "What we're trying to do is just inspire people, show that there are really interesting and very important problems to solve in the maritime and national security space."

Cyber crimes have been spreading and the Navy is ready to defend the country from such threats — it just needs some help. But there's a disconnect between tech-focused millennials and their image of the Navy, Staples said.

"We're not push ups and sit ups — particularly not the Navy," he said. "We are out there trying to be at the very cutting edge interface, in the digital space between cyber security, artificial intelligence, data science and human-machine teaming."

At HACKtheMACHINE, techies can try their hand at building solutions for three challenges: hack a network system to reroute ships and guide vessels through rough water; develop algorithms to predict and identify the implications of a cyberattack; and design a virtual reality interface for a submarine that used in disaster relief efforts.

More than 400 people from local schools and startups have signed up, said Brian MacCarthy, principal of Booz Allen Hamilton's Strategic Innovation Group. To him, the best part of this effort is getting these people interested in solving real world problems.

"You don't have to cut your hair and wear a uniform to help us fight in this mission," he said. "We're talking about global challenges — maritime security to disaster relief."

The U.S. Navy needs help from tech experts when it comes to national security. U.S. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE/FLICKR

HACKtheMACHINE starts on Sept. 22 PROVIDED

Staples had the same sentiment. The Navy has already been on the forefront of innovations like GPS and even Siri and he thinks tech advances in his world spurred the best benefits.

"We're doing this because we need to excite and engage the millennial generation so they understand there's an opportunity to have a social impact on something that really matters," he said, "instead of just building an app that delivers pizza better."

Apple's face recognition could pose privacy concerns, experts say

With new technology comes new concerns about privacy, and the iPhone Face ID is the latest to spark those worries. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Apple news makes waves, but the recently announced Face ID feature struck a chord with experts concerned about privacy implications.

One fear voiced again and again was the possibility that police could gain access someone's phone without their direct permission, simply by holding it up to their face.

Apple says that Face ID won't work if your eyes are closed, your face is turned away or you hold up a picture. Still, this tech will change more kinds of protocol than just how you check your texts.

Brett Kaufman, an attorney with the ACLU Center for Democracy, said that with new tech, privacy laws constantly become a new ball game that requires new rules.

"This is a different version of a similar problem that was introduced when these phones started having the thumbprint unlocking," he said. "There are two sets of issues presented by this technology: Fourth and Fifth Amendment issues."

The courts are adapting, but slowly. Some courts have ruled that a thumbprint ID is not the same as providing testimony — meaning anything police find on your phone, if unlocked that way, is not the same as you verbally communicating the information.

Now, Face ID will be an issue for courts to consider. Though Kaufman is hopeful the rules will adjust — "I think technology has been, for the last 25, 30 years, a real driver in changes for the law," he said — it will just take time.

Face ID on the iPhone X is a new way to unlock and authenticate your phone. PROVIDED BY APPLE

Face ID could also be the first foray into a world full of face scanning, which concerns Kaufman.

"One thing we definitely want to avoid is [people thinking], 'I use facial recognition to unlock my phone, what's the big deal if they want to take everybody's picture when they get on a plane,'" he said.

Those are different situations, Kaufman said, and even if face scanning doesn't have the same implications, using your face to unlock your phone could make you think having your face scanned is never a big deal.

Jonathan Frankle, a Ph.D. student at the Internet Policy Research Initiative at MIT, said that face recognition poses privacy concerns depending on how it's deployed.

He thinks it may make phones more secure, but other uses pose problems, like if police use the technology to track people.

"For any technology like this, there are ways of using it to improve privacy and to erode privacy," Frankle said. "The fact that this is a question people are asking … reassures me that we as a society are being vigilant about how facial recognition is rolled out."

How to help Mexico after Tuesday's devastating 7.1 magnitude earthquake

Here are ways to help the disaster relief efforts after yet another deadly earthquake hit the country. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Search and rescue effort continues for people in a collapsed residential building in Mexico City on Sept. 20. GETTY IMAGES

A 7.1 magnitude earthquake Tuesday left Mexico devastated, killing at least 217 people killed and destroying dozens of buildings.

You can help the Mexican Red Cross's first aid and disaster relief efforts with either a monetary donation or by directly buying needed items through Amazon. The Mexican Red Cross has opened a wish list on Amazon.com.mx, and the company will deliver the products directly to the Red Cross. You can also donate money to help the overall efforts, which include more than 500 volunteers and staff who were activated in the hours immediately following the earthquake.

Project Paz, a New York nonprofit that helps Latino children, has partnered with the El Paso Community Foundation to facilitate earthquake relief. You can donate online here and 100 percent of the donations will go to help earthquake victims in Chiapas and Oaxaca, according to the nonprofit.

Oxfam, an international confederation, is highlighting its Mexico branch for donations and is activating earthquake response there. Oxfam's goals after disasters are to "minimize and alleviate the suffering of people affected by humanitarian crises, to save lives and increase communities' resilience to future disasters," according to its website.

Organizations aimed at helping children are calling out for donations in the wake of the disasters. At least one of the collapsed buildings was a primary school in which more than 20 children and two adults were found dead, and from which another 30 children and 12 adults are missing.

UNICEF Mexico has called this earthquake the "biggest disaster we have experienced this decade," and is asking for donations in order to help support children and aid their return to school.

UNICEF's focus in Mexico is to ensure that children and adolescents there are guaranteed their rights, including education, protection of all children, including migrants, against violence, sexual exploitation and child labor, and addressing public policy concerning poverty, nutrition, HIV/AIDS and other inequalities.

You can also donate to Save the Children, which has served kids in Mexico since 1973 across education, health, hygiene, nutrition, emergency response and more. Save the Children is on the ground in the vulnerable communities affected by both earthquakes.

Mexican Actress Ana Breco also started a Go Fund Me page that had raised nearly $27,000 in 12 hours Wednesday.

As the search for survivors continues, you can help remotely through social media. Google's person-finder platform is now activated specifically for the Mexico earthquake, which is a way for people to share information about someone's whereabouts or ask for help in locating a loved one. There's also a Google Spreadsheet that lists those rescued, and people on Twitter are sharing information about hospitals that are offering free help.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, residents handle damage to their homes from Hurricane Maria on Sept. 20, 2017. GETTY IMAGES

How to help the victims of Hurricane Maria

This hurricane season has been particularly destructive, and Puerto Rico is the latest to get hit. Hurricane Maria, a Category 5 storm, devastated the island Wednesday after striking the Caribbean nation of Dominica, where seven people were killed.

"This is total devastation," Carlos Mercader, a spokesman for Puerto Rico's Gov. Ricardo Rossello, told CNN. "Puerto Rico,in terms of the infrastructure, will not be the same. … This is something of historic proportions."

"Puerto Rico ... will not be the same."
Carlos Mercader

Puerto Rican nonprofit ConPRmetidos has set up a recovery fund that will "exclusively support the victims of the catastrophic Hurricane Maria and Irma in Puerto Rico," helping with food, shelter, water and long-term recovery efforts.

The office of Puerto Rico's First Lady Beatriz Rosselló has created Unidos for Puerto Rico to help those on the island affected by both hurricanes. You can make a contribution online through PayPal.

The Dominica London High Commission, the diplomatic representative of the Caribbean island in the UK, has set up a Just Giving fundraiser to benefit Dominica.

GlobalGiving is a United States-based nonprofit that basically crowdfunds charity efforts across the world. You can donate here to a disaster recovery fund set up for all Caribbean victims of Hurricanes Maria and Irma. The money will go toward emergency supplies like food, water and medicine as well as long-term recovery assistance as residents recover and rebuild their islands.

The Caribbean Tourism Organization, which has headquarters in Barbados as well as New York and London, has set up a GoFundMe that will send money to the ministries of tourism affected by Maria in the organization's Caribbean member states. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

You really can be allergic to exercise

Exercise-induced anaphylaxis is a very real illness brought on by combining exercise with food or other triggers. MEAGAN MORRIS

Flushed skin. Heavy breathing. Profuse sweating.

These are all things that happen with intense exercise or an allergic reaction, but having an allergy to exercise? That's just what people say to get out of a workout … or is it?

While it's true that some people might fake a serious illness to get out of physical activity, there is such a thing as an exercise-induced allergy attack. And it's no laughing matter.

"My eyes were watering, I was having trouble breathing," Joe O'Leary told Popular Science of an allergic reaction he experienced during a post-workout meal in 2015. "In another five minutes I was struggling to breathe. I looked behind me into the mirror, and my eyes were swollen — every part of my face was swollen."

He quickly sought medical attention and found that he has exercise-induced anaphylaxis, or a reaction that only happens when combined with exercise. In O'Leary's case, he can experience a life-threatening reaction if he eats tomatoes, pepper, soy or nuts after a workout.

The good news? It only happens to about 50 out of every 100,000 people and it's pretty easy for doctors to diagnose. The bad news: There's no real explanation as to why it happens.

There is such a thing as an exercise-induced allergy attack. ISTOCK

"There are a variety of things that it might be," Maria Castells, an allergist at Brigham and Women's Hospital told Popular Science. "And for a proportion it's nothing, really, just the exercise itself."

Food is the common trigger, but exercise-induced anaphylaxis can also be caused by weather conditions, hormones and medicines like ibuprofen and aspirin. Low-impact activities — like house cleaning and yoga — are as likely to trigger a reaction as high-intensity workouts, but fitter people typically need more exercise than an unfit person to have an attack.

You'll be pretty aware of a reaction because symptoms — including hives, nausea, swelling, cramps, diarrhea, coughing and wheezing — come on strong and fast. And, like other allergic reactions, there's a chance it could be fatal if not treated.

Treatment for exercise-induced anaphylaxis is usually administered via an EpiPen. It's also a good idea to cut out triggers, too. O'Leary did: He no longer eats tomatoes or nuts at all — better safe than sorry.

Can drinking grape juice prevent you from getting the flu?

Shudder at the thought of getting a flu shot — or worse, making your kids get one? A natural alternative to the yearly vaccine is making the rounds on Facebook and Pinterest and sounds like a dream come true.

That remedy? Good, old-fashioned grape juice.

"It keeps the stomach bug from attaching to your digestive system if you're exposed to the virus," Julie Stepter Jennings wrote in a now-viral Facebook post of why her family drinks "a few sips" of grape juice every day from September until March.

"This will be my fifth year doing this with 100 percent success!"

The connection between grape juice and flu prevention is flimsy at best.

One blog — Must Have Mom — claims that the grape juice works by "changing the pH in your intestinal tract so that the virus can't multiply" and the vitamin C and antioxidants in the juice "flush and kill the virus."

"I'm no GI, but a good friend of mine is married to one and I know she does this as a preventative, too," another blogger added in her post about the power of grape juice to prevent the virus.

The problem? There's no science to back it up, only a 1976 study that suggested the polyphenols in the skins of the grapes could bind to viral proteins, reducing their effects. However, the research wasn't conducted on humans and later research showed that power the grapes had against the flu was temporary, at best.

So, chalk this one up as an old wive's tale, even if everyone swears it works.

"The only times we have gotten the stomach virus have been when we quit drinking grape juice," Must Have Mom wrote on her blog post. "This has proved to be very effective for us for the past five years."

It won't hurt you to drink grape juice — just don't expect it to work as well as a flu shot this winter. MEAGAN MORRIS

Some people have claimed that grape juice can help combat stomach flu. GETTY IMAGES

Your guide to Oktoberfest

Everything you need to know about the world's largest beer and folk festival.

Fodor's Travel

Munich's Oktoberfest is one of the most hotly anticipated events on Europe's fall calendar with more than 6 million visitors every year. In 14 big and 20 small tents, they consume almost 1.5 million gallons of beer and munch their way through over half a million chickens, 280,000 pork sausages and 110 oxen. Oktoberfest is the epitome of German hospitality, but navigating the local customs while gulping beer can be a challenge. Here are our best tips for surviving the world's largest folk festival.

Nearly 6 million people make a pilgrimage to Munich for Oktoberfest every year. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Choose the Right Outfit

If you want to blend in with the locals, get over your shyness and buy or rent a traditional outfit. Women wear dirndls, a circular cut dress complete with apron and puffy short sleeves. Avoid buying dirndls hitting above the knee, which is frowned upon and will expose you as a tourist right away.

Men wear lederhosen, often in combination with suspenders, calf warmers and Haferl shoes. With copious amounts of alcohol being thrown about, broken glass and thousands of people in a confined space, this is not the occasion for fancy shoes, and solid footwear is the sensible choice. Dress appropriately for both inside and outside conditions as the tents get very hot the longer the day goes on, but you'll hit the cooler autumn air once you leave in the evenings.

Get there early

If you think Germans are as punctual as the stereotype suggests — you're right! Many tables in the most popular tents like Käfer's Wiesnschänke get booked well in advance. There is no reason to panic if you haven't done so yet. In 2013, the rules were changed to give more space for people without reservations. Some tents can sit up to 10,000 people, but you need to get there early to snatch a table. Tents open at 10 a.m. during the week and at 9 a.m. on the weekends.

Sharing is caring

Oktoberfest is all about Bavarian Gemütlichkeit. The long wooden tables are communal, so don't hog a whole one for yourself and make new friends over gulping steins of beer. The locals even have a term for this: Wiesenbekanntschaft, which means "Oktoberfest acquaintance." These newfound friends will also come in handy when you need a bathroom break as they can save your seat.

Drink like a German

When ordering a beer, ask for a mass, not a stein (actually called a Bierkrug in German). A mass is 1 liter of beer and the standard measure at Oktoberfest.

Drinking an entire day without getting drunk (or going bankrupt) is quite a challenge, so make each mass last. Hold the beer glass by its handle (with one hand if you can), clank at the bottom, and toast a cheerful "Prost!" Note that the local wheat beer is strong stuff (up to 8 percent ABV).

Arrive dressed to impress!

Should your beverage get warm, it's perfectly OK to tip it out, but never ever consolidate beer. If you need a break from beer, ask for a Radler (beer with lemonade) or alcohol-free soda. At the end of the day, there will be plenty of Bierleichen, literally translated to "beer corpses," or the slightly nicer "sleeping drunks" found around the fairgrounds or on Kotzhügel (puke hill).

Respect the servers

Once you've finally made it into the tent and to your seat, you can relax a bit as there is a dedicated server who looks after several tables. Order from her unless you're standing, in which case, the windows by the kitchen are an alternative. Running around for hours, carrying up to eight full beer glasses and squeezing through tight crowds is a tough job. Keep your hands to yourself, even if you're just trying to get her attention, and tip generously.

Cash is king

Entrance to the fairgrounds and tents is free, but you'll need money for everything else from rollercoaster rides to food stalls. For Oktoberfest, a few places will accept credit cards (often with a minimum spend), but bring plenty of cash as a mass of beer will set you back around 10.50 euros ($12.50). There are some ATMs on the grounds, but the lines will be long. It's very common to pay a small pfand (deposit) for glasses, plates and silverware, thanks to the mass theft of "souvenirs" in the past. Upon returning the dishes, you'll get your deposit back.

What to watch for as Pats take on Texans

The great unknown

Bill Belichick is the master at figuring out opposing QBs, and the more game film, the better. Interestingly enough, Belichick has struggled at times when he faces rookie QBs. The great unknown is concerning. The Pats have five losses to rookie QBs under Belichick's watch — to Geno Smith, Mark Sanchez, Colt McCoy, Ben Roethlisberger and Russell Wilson. The Pats also needed a last second drive to beat EJ Manuel and the Bills once upon a time, and struggled to solve the then-lowly Raiders and Derek Carr a few years back.

The Pats will see rookie QB Deshaun Watson on Sunday. Watson did considerable damage to the Bengals last week on the ground, rushing five times for 67 yards — including a 49-yard TD scamper. While the run was impressive, Watson has struggled throwing the ball so far in his young career as he has just a 68.3 passer rating in two games played.

What to watch for: Pats vs. Texans

Run to victory?

The Texans defense, minus JJ Watt, gave the Patriots fits in the divisional round of the playoffs last season and laid down the latest blueprint for how to slow down the Pats' O (Atlanta in the first half of the Super Bowl and Kansas City in Week 1 used some of the Texans formula). In last January's playoff game, in which the Pats were up just 17-13 at halftime, the Texans picked off Tom Brady twice and gave him a 68.6 passer rating for the game. Brady completed just 18-of-38 passes in the contest.

The key to beating the stout Houston defense may be to run the ball. The Jaguars pounded the Texans in Houston in Week 1 of this season, 29-7, and gave the ball to Leonard Fournette 26 times for 100 yards and a touchdown. Houston's strength is its pass defense as it finished second in the NFL in passing yards allowed per game (201.6) last season.

The big hurt

Rob Gronkowski (groin), Danny Amendola (concussion) and Dont'a Hightower (sprained MCL) all practiced this week for the Patriots, meaning that it's likely all three see action on Sunday. The Pats will need contributions from all of them if they want to walk away victorious against a team they could very well see this coming January as well. Gronkowski led the Patriots in receiving this past Sunday against the Saints, catching nine of six targets for 116 yards that including a 53-yard touchdown. Amendola led the Pats in receiving in the Week 1 loss to Kansas City, catching six of seven targets for an even 100 yards.

To the Defendant: The Plaintiff has filed a Complaint for Divorce requesting that the Court grant a divorce for Irretrievable Breakdown of the Marriage. The Complaint is on file at the Court.

An Automatic Restraining Order has been entered in this matter preventing you from taking any action which would negatively impact the current financial status of either party. SEE Supplemental Probate Court Rule 411.

You are hereby summoned and required to serve upon: Sarah Crilley, 9 Forest Ave, Everett, MA 02149 your answer, if any, on or before 11/02/2017. If you fail to do so, the court will proceed to the hearing and adjudication of this action. You are also required to file a copy of your answer, if any, in the office of the Register of this Court.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.

Register of Probate

CITATION ON PETITION FOR FORMAL ADJUDICATION

Docket No. SU16P2935EA

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT

Estate of: Anne E Williams
Date of Death: 07/22/2016

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114
(617) 788-8300

A Petition for Appointment of Special Personal Representative has been filed by Lorriane M Everitt of Malden MA and Lorriane M Everitt of Malden MA requesting that the Court enter a formal Decree and Order and for such other relief as requested in the Petition.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before: 10:00 a.m. on the return day of 10/19/2017.

This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an affidavit of objections within thirty (30) days of the return day, action may be taken without further notice to you.

UNSUPERVISED ADMINISTRATION UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS UNIFORM PROBATE CODE (MUPC)

A Personal Representative appointed under the MUPC in an unsupervised administration is not required to file an inventory or annual accounts with the Court. Persons interested in the estate are entitled to notice regarding the administration directly from the Personal Representative and may petition the Court in any matter relating to the estate, including the distribution of assets and expenses of administration.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.

Aries An opportunity may not be as good as it sounds. Research the ups and downs of whatever situation you face before you agree to jump in.

Taurus Don't let the actions of others sway your opinion. If someone is enthusiastic about a deal, make sure to see if there is any substance behind what's being offered.

Gemini An opportunity to make a work-related change is encouraged. Discuss your options with someone who is already working in a vocation that interests you.

Cancer A steady, levelheaded approach to life and dealing with others will help you bypass discord. Refuse to let your emotions spin out of control and lead to impulsive actions.

Leo Take care of your responsibilities before moving on to enjoyable pastimes if you want to avoid complaints or criticism. A change may tempt you, ensure you can afford it.

Virgo Walk away from a financial deal that leaves you feeling uncertain. Bank on what you know to be legitimate, and don't budge if someone puts pressure on you.

Libra A disagreement should be handled carefully. A fair solution may not be enough. Offer an incentive that you know will be too difficult to refuse.

Scorpio Someone will take advantage of your vulnerability if you share your emotional concerns. Keep your personal thoughts and affairs secret. Concentrate on getting ahead.

Sagittarius Confusion will set in while you are traveling or trying to obtain information. Ask questions that will help you better understand the changes going on around you.

Capricorn Emotional matters will escalate if someone is pressuring you or if you try to force your will on others. You are best off handling matters and doing things on your own.

Aquarius A change will do you good. An unexpected opportunity will boost your enthusiasm and encourage you to get involved in a joint venture.

Pisces Physical as well as professional changes will boost your morale, giving you an extra appeal. Partnerships are encouraged. EUGENIA LAST
